Officers can learn about diabetic emergencies with online course

Can you distinguish between intoxication and a diabetic emergency? Specialized Course #2009 Diabetic Emergency and Officer Response will help you learn how to do so.

Course helps distinguish between intoxication and diabetes

Every law enforcement and corrections officer is familiar with the U.S. Supreme Court decision of Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386 (1989). Use of force, reasonable objectiveness, and totality of circumstances are phrases that instantly come to mind when this case is mentioned. That's because the legal standard for determining whether there is an incident of excessive use of force was established as a result of the Supreme Court decision in this case.

Just as significant is the incident that prompted this Supreme Court case. While experiencing a diabetic emergency Graham was observed acting suspiciously by a law enforcement officer. Connor investigated and called other officers to the scene. Ultimately, multiple officers ignored Graham's plea for help with his emergency and he was handcuffed and arrested. In the process, Graham received numerous physical injuries. Graham was released from custody after it was determined that he had not committed a crime. The Supreme Court ruled that the officers were not reasonable in ignoring Graham's request for help and the amount of force used.

The Florida Legislature, being aware of the need for officers to be able to recognize and distinguish between symptoms of a diabetic emergency and alcohol or drug induced behavior, approved House Bill 201. Designated as the "Arthur Green, Jr., Act" the bill was signed into law on June 16, 2015. Under section 943.1726, F.S., the new law requires FDLE to establish online continued employment training relating to diabetic emergencies. The training includes instruction on the recognition of symptoms of diabetic emergencies, distinguishing it from alcohol intoxication or drug overdose, and the appropriate first aid for such an emergency.

In support of the legislation the Criminal Justice Standards and Training Commission (CJSTC) adopted this new online course into its Specialized Training Program. The Bureau of Professional Development within the Florida

30 graduate from FDLE Special Agent Training

Thirty proud members of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement Special Agent Training Class 35 graduated and took the oath of office in ceremonies held on Thursday, Sept. 3, in Tallahassee.

"Today is a proud day for FDLE," said Commissioner Rick Swearingen. "Not only are we able to welcome this outstanding group of newly sworn special agents to our FDLE family, but we also celebrate the collaboration of our training efforts and commitment to FDLE's fundamental values of Service, Integrity, Respect, and Quality."

The men and women in the class, many of whom are already law enforcement officers with years of experience, were offered 104 blocks of instruction on 47 topic areas over eight weeks, which involved academic and tactical training to prepare them for FDLE's many responsibilities.

FDLE special agents are sworn officers with statewide authority to investigate and enforce Florida's criminal laws.

FDLE Special Agents assist the state's criminal justice community by providing a variety of services including: identifying and investigating organized and multi-jurisdictional crimes; enhancing domestic security preparedness; collecting and disseminating criminal intelligence information; investigating public corruption; seizing illegally obtained assets; dismantling drug trafficking organizations; assisting in locating missing children; and providing protective services to Florida's Governor and other dignitaries.

We congratulate the Special Agent Training Class graduates and welcome them to the FDLE family.

The Special Agent Training included scenarios and mock trials.

Department of Law Enforcement has created Specialized Course #2009 Diabetic Emergency and Officer Response. The new course is now online at <http://www.fdle.state.fl.us/Content/bpdtraining/diabeticemergency/story.html> where it is available to all law enforcement and corrections officers.

Law enforcement and corrections agencies are encouraged to have their officers complete this online training. The course may be completed in as little as 20 minutes depending on the pace of the student. To receive credit in the Automated Training Management System (ATMS) students must print, sign, and date the certificate of completion. The student should then provide a copy to the agency's designee as proof of course completion to be entered into the ATMS. Two (2) hours of credit are given toward mandatory retraining hours. For technical support students may contact the Bureau of Professional Development at 850-410-7373.

Focus groups' input steers changes to the 2017 Corrections curriculum

From April to June 2015, Bureau of Training staff conducted 16 focus groups across the state to evaluate current Corrections Basic Recruit curriculum.

Representatives from the Department of Corrections, training centers, private correctional facilities, and sheriff's agencies were invited to attend and provide feedback on ways to improve content and teaching methods. Staff recorded participant comments and responded by making revisions to the Corrections Basic Recruit textbook for 2016. Specifically, content was revised or added in officer ethics, interpersonal communications, report writing, gangs, and special populations, while content was condensed in radio communications and fingerprinting.

The focus groups revealed that instructors and agencies would also like more extensive discussion of several areas, including crisis intervention, Incident Command System, manipulation, and contraband.

The 2017 edition of the Corrections Basic Recruit curriculum will address these concerns. Throughout the fall and winter, staff will be working with subject matter experts to enhance these topics as well as redesign the accompanying instructor guides.

Extensive revision of textbook organization is not envisioned at this time; however, the scope of instructor guides will expand to incorporate more strategies instructors can use to provide practical experience for students. The goal of the project is to provide more resources for trainers to apply "textbook knowledge" and better prepare recruits for the job.

The Department of Corrections Office of Inspector General received initial accreditation.

The Commission for Florida Law Enforcement Accreditation, Inc. was formed in 1993 in response to Florida Statutes requiring a voluntary law enforcement accreditation program. CFA is recognized as the premier state law enforcement accreditation program in the United States.

In 2007, The CFA expanded the program to include standards and a process specifically to accredit inspectors general offices.

Established in 1998, FCAC serves as Florida's jail accreditation program. Accreditation standards were initially based on the Florida Model Jail Standards (FMJS) and Florida Statutes. To make this the most comprehensive and beneficial program available, additional standards have been adopted to address personnel, fiscal, and other areas not covered by FMJS.

In 2006, The FCAC expanded the program to include standards and a process specifically to accredit organizations with pretrial responsibilities. To find out more, please visit: <http://www.flaccreditation.org/index.htm>
