Julio Bonchea

Aliases: Julio Bonachea, Manuel Tata Rodriguez, Miguel Tata Rodriguez

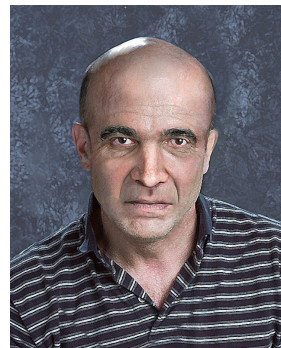

On August 4, 1998, Julio Bonchea was sentenced to 18 years in prison for attempted murder after heading up a home invasion robbery in Miami during which one victim was stabbed and another victim was shot at several times. Bonchea escaped from Calhoun Correctional Institution on March 26, 2000. Authorities believe he changed into civilian clothing brought in by his brother, donned a disguise, and exited the institution undetected through the front gate.

Bonchea remained on the run until June of 2001 when he was arrested in San Jose, Costa Rica for attempted murder. Bonchea was sentenced to 11 years in a Costa Rica prison. He escaped again in June 2005.

Bonchea was born in Cuba has family members living there. He could be living there or possibly in South or Central America. Bonchea has worked previously in the travel industry as well as in insurance sales, and in marketing and sales jobs. He speaks Spanish and English.
