

High Speed Pursuits: Reducing the Risks

Daniel W. Smith

This study examines the issue of high-speed pursuits by Florida Sheriff's Offices. A review of current policy, case law, and technology indicates a need for constant review and updating of policies related to police pursuits. The importance of appropriate training for officers, careful tracking of pursuits and employment of alternative apprehension methods is also emphasized.